

Cama'i – Hello,

We are in the final days of our building renovation! As contractors complete finishing touches, our staff has moved back into the museum and we are assembling furniture, building exhibits, moving our library, and more. Until May, we will remain closed to the public as we clean up and set up. While you wait for us to reopen, you can find the museum store in the downtown marketplace, enjoy great content on our website, and participate in events. Thanks for your patience, and please save the date. Our grand reopening is May 22.

Beaded Cuff Workshop

Learn the techniques to make a beaded cuff. We'll provide the supplies and instructions from Alutiiq artist Kayla McDermott. The museum is offering two one-day workshops. Thanks to generous funding from the City of Kodiak, there is no charge to participate. However, space is limited and pre-registration is required. Reserve a spot today.

A Gift to Collections

In January we received three cultural objects for our collections—a mid-19th-century wooden bowl from Kodiak Island and two skin bags created by Alutiiq artist Lalla Williams. The objects are from the collections of the Ralph T. Coe Center for the Arts, in Santa Fe, New Mexico. They were gifted to the Alutiiq Museum as part of a rehoming initiative for the Coe Center's Indigenous collection.

Meet Roy Jones

Gloves trimmed with sea otter fur by Roy Jones.

Originally from Larsen Bay, Alutiiq Seal artist Roy Jones is a skin sewer who works with local furs to make hats, gloves, and earmuffs. Meet Roy and see a selection of his work at our First Friday Art Walk event. Please contact Chyian Heine for more information.

Watercolor painting by Cheryl Lacy, beaded moose hide barrette by Nancy Butler, heart earrings by Marcia Patrick, and flower earrings on antler by Yvonne Mullan.

A piece of jewelry is a lasting, personal gift. Flowers fade. Clothes goes out of style. But beautiful jewelry can last a lifetime. Visit the Alutiiq Museum Store for one of a kind earrings, bracelets, and necklaces. Show some love for your sweetheart and support Kodiak artists. Say qunukamken, I love you, with a piece of genuine, Native made jewelry.
